

Eton Institute

Eton

Press Release

Winner of Netbook Computer for the February Draw Announced by Eton Institute:

Dubai, 04 March 2010 – Eton Institute, announced the winner of the February competition as Akamaral Satzhanova, a Kazakhstani national who undertook an English course at the institute and won a brand-new, power-packed Netbook Computer. Her name was picked out from a pool of eligible students that had registered for a course during the month of February.

Expressing her surprise at winning the coveted prize, she said: “I am very happy and surprised to have won something that I have wanted for quite some time now, that too, to have won amongst all the other students at the institute.”

Speaking about her experience in learning English at Eton Institute she added: “The teachers were very helpful and patient and gave me the confidence which I was lacking before the start of the course. The classes have given me immense confidence and have helped me remove my complex with the language and to speak without hesitation.”

Eton Institute, offering language training in over a 100 languages, have recently revealed plans for their biggest give-away celebration this 11th March in commemoration of their 4th anniversary. The young and vibrant institute announced that they will be offering an exciting prize every single hour throughout the day, also popularly dubbed as Eton Day by students and well-wishers. Additionally, students will have the chance to register for all their 2010 courses at massive discounts that will be offered exclusively on the day.

For more information about the services provided by Eton Institute or the Eton Day celebrations on 11 March 2010 email info@eton.ac or call 800-Eton (8003866) to speak with an adviser. To receive the latest updates about the festivities planned and other monthly offers or promotions join Eton Institute on their Facebook or Twitter fan pages.